An Education and Training Pharmacist is like a coach for the pharmacy team, helping others build their skills and confidence with medicines. Instead of working with patients every day, they focus on teaching pharmacy staff, students, and other healthcare professionals how to use medicines safely and effectively. They organise workshops, create learning resources, and support new pharmacists and technicians as they settle into their roles. They need to know their stuff — but also be great communicators, mentors, and problem solvers.

If you enjoy explaining things, helping others grow, and being part of a learning-focused team, this role could be a perfect fit
